THE DEEP-HOLLOW ROAD

BY BLISS CARMAN

Cool in the summer mountain's heart,
It lies in dim mysterious shade,
Left of the highway turning in,
With grassy rut and easy grade.

The marshes and the sea behind,
The solemn fir-blue hills before;
Here is the inn for Heavy-heart
And this is weary Free-foot's door.

O fellows, I have known it long;
For joy of life turn in with me,
We bivouac with peace to-night,
And good-bye to the brawling sea.

You hear? That's master thrush. He knows
The voluntaries fit for June,
And when to falter on the flute
In the satiety of noon.

A mile or two we follow in This rosy streak through forest gloom,
Then for the apple orchard slopes
And all the earth one snowy bloom!

BOHEMIA

Oh the coast
of green Bohemia,
Where the shining sea
Laughs to shame
the learned fables
Of geography!

Whither from
inclement seasons
Flee uncaptured ships Freighted with forbidden raptures
Ripe for lovers' lips!

Shining paths
of green Bohemia!
Sweetly there holds sway
One who smiles
on all our homage
In her gracious way.

EMIA

past
in Bohemia,
the shining sea
to shame
the fables
of rhapsody!

from
gent seasons
of stained ships
with
the raptures
of lovers' lips!

paths
in Bohemia!
the holds sway
of miles
our homage
in a gracious way.

and gently,
white and graciously,
from her slender hands
falls the spell
of foreign longing,
flower of far-off lands

and laughter,
tears and kisses,
joy of passed pain
and purposes that
missed completion,
the quest in vain!

Oh the ways where
things are fairer,
even than they seem,
and our Lady
lures us always,
the wonder of dream!
